This piano has great sentimental value to my family. My grandmother played by ear and every time there was a family gathering, we'd all look forward to having her play as we all sang along. Best guess is that it was made in the 1940s. Grandma antiqued it in the 70s when everyone was antiquing things. She passed away in the 90s and I've had it ever since. We have no one left in our household who plays and would love for someone to have it that will actually give it some use. It needs tuning but all keys work. The stool top needs to be tightened.
