This is an Ernest and Gabler upright piano from about 1910. It spent most of it's life in a church in Brooklyn, NY. It was gifted to a congregant in the early 2000's and then passed on to us in 2010. We've had it tuned, a little irregularly, by a piano tuner who told us he was able to tune it to itself, but it is not suitable to be tuned and played with other instruments. Our daughter has learned how to play on it and is now moving on to another instrument, as did the daughter of the previous owner who passed the piano on to us. The sound box is good, all the keys work. It is painted oak.
