We are only the second owners of this piano. The original owner kept this with her from early childhood to her 80's. All the piano parts are original from early 1900's (circa 1908). We just took the piano (2/2/19) to Enumclaw Music to have it assessed for playing condition. Our family rarely played it (20 years). It needs a tuning service. It has not been tuned the whole time we have had it and I do not know the last time the original owner had it tuned. The keys are in incredible shape with only one small chip in the second to last white key. There is one key that seems to have something stuck underneath it, but the hammer and strings are in great shape (as page 1 / 2 per the music store owner). Someone tried to refinish the piano from its original satin ebony finish, but there are still areas of original finish left. We are unable to put the time and money into restoring this great family piano. Hopeful to find someone who can. The piano has been located on an inside wall in our basement until yesterday. Piano is now loaded on our trailer in the garage and ready to go. Would love to have it go to the right place.

Thank you for your consideration,
